

How Parents of Infants Can Support Social-Emotional Development

Provide a safe home and play environment for your baby

- Do a safety check at home to make it safe for your baby.
- Have a safe way to transport your baby.
- Know ways to keep your baby safe throughout the day.
- Have someone you trust who can help take care of your baby.
- Provide access to health care for your baby.
- Know how to manage your feelings of anger and frustration that come up when you are with your baby.

Provide predictable schedule/routines and an appropriate environment for your baby

- Create and follow routines that make eating enjoyable and satisfying for you and your baby.
- Provide a nap and sleeping routine for your baby that is predictable and appropriate for your baby's age.
- Use daily activities as playtime or make time each day to play with your baby.

Respond to your baby's needs

- Understand your baby's nonverbal communication and know how to respond.
- Understand your baby's verbal communication and know how to respond.
- Know how to help your baby calm down.

Provide activities and play with your baby

- Provide your child with books, toys, and playthings that are safe and that your baby enjoys.
- Know the age-appropriate games that your baby enjoys.

This infographic was created from Social-Emotional Assessment/Evaluation Measure (SEAM™), Research Edition

Learn more at <http://bit.ly/SEAMPost>